

COOLIDGE REJECTS BRITISH PROPOSAL FOR WARSHIP PACT

Failure of Geneva Conference
Accepted As U. S.
Acts

NO MORE PARLEYS

Economy Object Is Recalled
As U. S. States Final Position

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Through President Coolidge and his two cabinet advisers, Secretary of State Kellogg and Secretary of the Navy Willbur, the American Government has reflected its chief objection to the British proposals for warship construction presented to the Geneva three-power conference on the basis that they call for a larger American naval expansion than the Administration wishes to effect.

Feeling that the conference will in all probability culminate without the formulation of a limitation agreement because of the inacceptability of the British plan to Japan and the United States, the officials of the Washington Government today were concentrating upon the study of the American views which will undoubtedly be presented at the parley's adjournment. The end of the conference is forecast at a plenary session next week and Ambassador Gibson, chief of the American delegation, is expected to present this country's position in an address at the final meeting.

There is hardly a faint ray of hope in official circles here that the impasse brought about by the British plan will be dispelled and the conference will be continued after this plenary gathering.

The President at his summer White House at Rapid City, S. D., is understood to be plainly determined not to accept the British terms. Officials here also regard that with the finality of the British attitude an agreement is impossible and now the only task for the conference is for each Government to clearly define its position on the adjournment.

WILKES-BARRE MAY ELEVATE SIDEWALKS

Plan Submitted To Permit
Widening Of The Streets

OTHER STATE NEWS

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 30 (I. N. S.).—Wilkes-Barre may have an elevated system all its own.

Dr. F. P. Archer has presented to the City Council, civic organizations and Luzerne County judges a plan whereby a double decked sidewalk could be built in the business district, to make it possible to widen the streets. Dr. Archer suggests that the elevated sidewalks be of artistic design, and be erected around the square, with bridges over the principal intersections, and staircases at each corner to permit passage from one level to another. Terminals could be built at each corner. Dr. Archer would have the cost of the project divided between the street railway company, the city and property owners.

MT. CARMEL, Pa., July 30 (I. N. S.).—Northumberland claims both the most peaceful and the most warlike communities in this district.

Locust Gap, near here, is broadcasting the report of Constable Johnny Zeno, of Mt. Carmel Township, that he has not found it necessary to make a single arrest in Locust Gap in three years.

Meantime citizens of Mt. Carmel are up in arms over crime conditions here, hardly a week-end passing without a murder or shooting.

At least three persons listed as desperate characters by State Police are at large after escaping in Mt. Carmel. These include Felix (Man o' War) Boccicchio, Atlas gunman, Police Maniello and Charles Bastiano.

William J. Evans, of New York, supreme president of the order, will preside at business meetings. H. K. Fickles of York will act as chief marshal of the parade.

CHARLOTTE, Pa., July 30 (I. N. S.).—Anywhere a steamboat can go—he can make it.

This is the proud boast of Capt. Dippold, master of the steamer Old Reliable, that tows scows for a United States dredge boat on the Monongahela River.

Dippold, despite his 65 years, is as spry as the average man of 50, and is considered as capable a pilot as most men half his years.

The old riverman is a personal friend of many people of this section.

LANDMARK IN FALLSINGTON TO UNDERGO CHANGE

Old "Hip-Roof House" Sold
To Orthodox Friends By Hicksites

TO REMODEL BUILDING

Over 60 Scholars Will Be Accommodated When School Is Instituted There

FALLSINGTON, Pa., July 30.—With a history of approximately 200 years to its record the old hip-roof house, a landmark in this section of the county for years, is about to undergo another change.

The structure, thought to have been used almost two centuries ago as a public school, has been sold by the Hicksite Friends to the Orthodox Society of Friends here, who have outlined elaborate plans for its renovation, arranging same for the accommodation of pupils for a private school.

The building itself is as interesting as its history—with fine old trees and splendid boxwood hedge surrounding it in its setting on a large plot of ground. The main section of the structure is of stone, with smaller additions built of wood.

Each of the 19 spacious old-fashioned rooms are light and airy, and the halls very large as those found in houses built years back. There are three stories to the main structure with eight rooms on each of the first two floors, and three large chambers on the third. Massive are the beams and joists that form the mainstay of the "old hip-roof house," as it is commonly known, and the workmanship was well executed, standing the test of the years in fine manner.

The house presents a fine appearance at present, the main portion being white-washed, with trimmings of dark brown. A double garage is located on the grounds.

Years ago the place was used for a meeting house, the exact dates being unavailable. A separation occurred between the two societies of Friends who conducted the meetings, each building their own meeting houses in the vicinity. A reference made to its history by a newspaper a few years ago ran like this:

"Probably the third meeting house was built in 1728 as we read at that date 'The cost of the new meeting house is 1000 lbs.' Tradition claims this to be the building which is still standing and used as a residence, and called the 'old hip-roof house.' For many years this was a boarding school."

About 65 years ago the Misses Esther and Beulah Lower conducted a private boarding school at the place. A time after the private school was closed, a library was conducted here in the first floor of the building, and a portion was also rented by a Dr. George Adams, of Bristol, a dentist, who catered to a number of patients in this section.

It has since that time been used as a dwelling house, one of the residents being David Satterthwaite, of this place, who moved there 36 years ago, residing in the structure for a period of 10 years. Before that period and since the place has been owned by the Hicksites. Many families have moved into the house, at present three families dwelling therein.

Many changes will take place on the interior of the building before the scholars can be taken care of. Hot-water heat, electric lights, and an electric pump to supply running water will be installed. Modern school furniture will also be purchased, and plans are being discussed for a lunch room. Five teachers will be employed to instruct the pupils who will number 60 or more. Scholars will be admitted for instruction from the first to the seventh grades. Pupils from any section may enter these private halls of learning.

The Orthodox Friends have been conducting a school in a building attached to their meeting house, but these quarters have now become crowded, making it necessary to find better accommodations. The pupils will be transported from their homes to their classes via buses.

Located as it is opposite the World War Memorial, on the Bristol and Tyburn Roads, the site is a most excellent one for a school, it being a central point for scholars from the country district hereabouts.

WILL FIGHT ANY EFFORT BY N. Y. TO GET RIVER WATER

Delaware Valley Protective
Association Will Oppose
The Plan

WANTS 600,000,000 GALS.

Much Is Lost Through Leakage, It Is Contended

Delaware Valley Protective Association, recently formed and in which a number of Bristol men and firms are enlisted as members, plans to carry on an active campaign against the impounding of the waters of the Delaware River by New York state.

The reported plan of New York City to take 600,000,000 gallons daily from the flood waters of the Delaware tributaries in New York state has aroused much opposition.

"Any attempt on the part of New York to grab the waters of the Delaware will be fought to a finish," said a member of the Delaware Valley Association.

Frank J. Eppel, Trenton, N. J., and president of the Delaware Valley Protective Association, composed of cities and towns in the Delaware watershed, took a similar view of the reported plan. He said the association will take active steps to fight any attempt to divert water from the Delaware.

According to the reported plan, New York City now proposes to tap the Delaware tributaries in that State, it being claimed by the backers of the move that the water is wasted at present, flowing down the Delaware River channel into the ocean. According to the proposal, the water is to be impounded in a series of reservoirs for New York City's benefit. It is claimed that the metropolis can wait no longer for an additional supply, which must be ready by 1935.

In a recent bulletin of a New York research bureau it is claimed that New York City now wastes 280,000,000 gallons of water a day, through leakage in mains and house fixtures.

LIFE IN THE COUNTRY

Considerable discussion is heard these days as to the means that may be adopted to keep folks on the farm. The situation has become serious, for many experienced farmers are moving into the cities, either for the purpose of earning what they consider easier money, or to use their savings in giving their children and themselves the advantage of city life. Whatever the cause, the situation remains, and it constitutes a problem that may well engage the attention of national and state authorities. The fear is expressed that the production of food may become reduced to such an extent that the scarcity will not only greatly increase prices, but threaten the welfare of the people.

While the reasoning is purely academic and subject to the views of each individual it is probably true that the persons who make occasional trips from the rural districts to the larger towns enjoy these visits and the things they see much more than those who see them every day. It is a case where familiarity sometimes breeds contempt. In the matter of better school facilities in the towns, there is in most cases no place for argument, although some progress has been made in a number of states to bring about a centralization of teaching that gives country pupils some of the advantages of the city in a course of study.

There is nothing to justify undue pressure to keep men and women and boys and girls on the farms. Rural life should be so attractive in itself that enough persons will make choice of the country life to insure the crops of grain and quantities of other foodstuffs needed to maintain all the people at a reasonable cost.

GETTING NEW BUSINESS

The progressive business firm finds that it needs to be constantly making new friends and creating a new circle of customers. If it just depends on satisfying those who have previously bought its goods, it is likely to see its trade diminished. Population changes more rapidly now than formerly, and if a firm has a certain list of customers this year, it can expect, as the result of all the changes that naturally occur, that a considerable proportion of those customers will not be on the list in a year or two.

Also people are changeable in their habits, and unless a very energetic effort is made to hold old customers by advertising, a lot of them will go elsewhere, attracted by the various inducements that are offered them.

People are not much inclined, as they were often formerly, just to trade at one place or a few places right along year after year. They are quick to get the idea, if some firm seems to be hustling a little harder than its competitors to please the people, and no feeling of habit or sentiment of loyalty is apt to hold them, if they think they can do better by going elsewhere for something they want.

By an active campaign of advertising, a firm can keep making new business friends, to make up for those who drift elsewhere. It does not take elaborate persuasion to win such new customers in these times.

Always find out for yourself whether a thing is or isn't.

Many troubles can be ignored, but one of them isn't toothache.

SYNOPSIS

Mary "Elaine" Sullivan—slender, beautiful, red-headed—is an orphan. Wally Mason, a young reporter, loves Mary. But she disbelieves in love. Mary keeps house for her brothers, Bobby and David. David is sentenced to prison for an auto fatality. The Charity Department takes Bobby. Wally proposes; but Mary goes to New York, gets a cloakroom job in a night club. It is raided. Mary is adjudged to have criminal influences, and is sentenced to a reform school. She gets a letter from Bobby, who is ill, and runs away to visit him.

She had said she would come if he needed her, and she had. Which was as balm to the cheek when lay the rasp. After lifting a very thin hand with which to stroke her hair, once, it was all he could manage—he fell asleep again, both his hands in hers.

It was so that they found them, thin, spry Miss Campbell, the superintendent, who blew through the door as though she had been lifted by the wind of a shock and set down in the exact spot to which her duties called her. Miss Campbell was a bit out of breath, and seemed to lose even more at the sight of Mary in the raincoat, sitting stiffly beside the bed. Mary had anticipated this, of course. It was not the shock to her to see Miss Campbell as it seemed to be for Miss Campbell to see Mary. Her face, as she stood there in the doorway, seemed not quite to grasp the enormity of the offense which had just been telephoned her from the Home, up-state.

"It doesn't seem possible," she had said to Maria. Gaspeth it, rather, in terrible enjoyment of the

"What are you doing here and what have you to say for yourself?"

doubtless pleasurable task before her.

"—get little thing, and you'd never think," continued the voice of Maria in her ear,—"don't see how she expected to get away with it though—because I knew where she would go, and of course—"

And here was Miss Campbell with the culprit before her. That is, there doubtless was a culprit. She took it for granted, did Miss Campbell, that the raincoat had not come of itself, and there was that sleek head besides, which no amount of jolting on dirt roads could disarrange.

Miss Campbell entered. Slowly. Coming to stand before Mary on the further side of the cot. Rehabilitated in her customary frigidly which she slipped over her head each morning and buttoned down the front with her blue denim that stuck out in a circle about her thin cottoned ankles.

She felt that it was Mary who should give an explanation of her presence there. Had she not learned the cause of Mary's presence through Maria, her manner would have lacked its present degree of surety.

But Mary said nothing. Mary sat with Robert's hands in hers and gazed up at Miss Campbell where she stood. Mary, too, had resolved to say nothing. What was the use? This brittle person in starched blue denim doubtless was entirely aware of the facts of the case. Let her say what it was she had decided to do with the runaway. It didn't matter. Robert was sleeping easily, and had been for the hour that she had sat at his bedside. It didn't matter what would be done with Mary now. She had accomplished her purpose, and no punishment could remove the balm that had seeped into young Robert's rasped chest with her coming.

"Well?" said Miss Campbell, impatiently. There was a limit to human endurance. She came to stand beside Mary, her skirts rustling as she walked and her heels coming down click upon the scrubbed stone floor.

"Well?" she repeated, with still

BUY IN BRISTOL!
A DOLLAR SPENT IN BRISTOL IS WORTH TWO SPENT ELSEWHERE BECAUSE IT IS REINVESTED BY LOCAL PEOPLE IN LOCAL ENTERPRISES AND HELPS TO PAY FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS

Did you ever really give the subject of the local merchant and you any serious thought?

Perhaps you are a loyal citizen and patronize local shops and stores as a matter of loyalty, but as this is not a lecture it will do no harm to read this, anyhow.

Your local merchant is first a citizen, a resident of your community the same as you are.

He lives in your community, pays taxes along with you for the upkeep and improvement of your community; he raises his family and sends his children to school—schools which he helps, with you, to maintain.

If he is a butcher, he buys clothes and shoes for his family from a fellow-merchant. No matter what his line of business, he spends money with other business men of the community.

He banks in local banks; he takes his family of an evening to the local shows.

Summed up, the money he makes in the community is spent in it.

Were it not for your local merchant, there would be no schools, no paved streets, no public buildings, no progress nor prosperity. He is here day in and day out, rain or shine, giving his time and energy and money to whatever will benefit the district, taking part in the administrations of the community or aiding to regulate the administration for the best interests of the community by his vote.

HE IS A CITIZEN—

Is he not entitled, then, to consideration?

But there is something more than a call for your loyalty to him as citizen to citizen—neighbor to neighbor.

Living here as he does, he comes to know his customers. They are to him not "just customers," but "fellow citizens," "good neighbors." As he will be here tomorrow and the next day and next year, meeting his customers face to face, day after day, his business gets his personal attention—every transaction is a personal dealing between him and the patron.

He is your neighbor—your fellow citizen, building for tomorrow and next year, and fully cognizant that the only way to build is to sell good goods at right prices.

Your local merchant is in himself a guarantee of his goods and prices and services because he is always at the same stand meeting largely the same customers.

He cannot exist upon the patronage of transients—his livelihood comes from permanent residents; his aim is to make permanent residents regular customers. He must do this—hence his wares, his prices and his service are all and always arranged and held to this end.

You never heard your live-wire, wide-awake home merchant say, "Oh, well, one customer more or less makes no difference." Every customer, to him, is important; a new customer is eagerly sought, and a customer less—well, your local merchant will not let it happen if anything just and reasonable under the sun will prevent such a thing happening.

So not alone out of a sense of loyalty to your community, but for your own sake—for the sake of your purse and the satisfaction of being given personal attention and service—buy of our home merchants.

REFRIGERATION ADVANCE MARKED BY CHEVROLET

Refrigerator automobiles, capable of maintaining a constant temperature of near-zero, denote a new advance in the adaptation of the motor car to every type and kind of transportation problem.

Twenty Chevrolet chassis were recently purchased by the Detroit branch of a national firm whose business is selling ice cream products on the major traffic arteries in and around the city.

On every chassis is mounted a specially-constructed body into which the refrigerator has been built as a unit. The refrigerator occupies the upper section of the body, while beneath it is the cooled compartment, with a capacity of 960 bricks of ice cream. The temperature of this compartment, according to Pat Potter, special representative, is maintained at from five to ten degrees above zero to insure that the ice cream bricks and "suckers" will be sufficiently hard-frozen to tempt the parched motorist.

"This refrigerator," Mr. Potter explained, "has a six-inch insulated wall and a capacity of 300 pounds of ice and 75 pounds of salt. Average consumption of ice in 24 hours is about 125 pounds. This is packed into the tank through an opening of ice in 24 hours and is sufficient to keep the ice cream appetizing in the hottest climate."

Every morning the twenty trucks at the Detroit office take on a fresh supply and then hurry to designated places around the city. All sales are made by the roadside from these portable store-rooms. Chevrolets were selected to carry the refrigerators, it was explained, in order to get rapid, economical and dependable transportation and at the same time neat and attractive cars with a "sales appeal."

Why are there so many charming women today?

Never before have there been so many charming women. Wherever you go, you find them. Vivacious, happy, beautiful, delightfully dressed in the most exquisite taste.

Clear, pink-and-white complexion, luxurious, well-kept hair, gleaming teeth, trim athletic carriage — these are almost universal characteristics of American women of today.

Why?

At first thought it may sound absurd, but one of the most powerful teachers has been advertising.

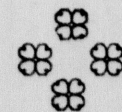

Advertising has helped to teach us all that the real basis of beauty is health and cleanliness. We are the greatest users of soap and water in the world.

Advertising has taught us how to care for our teeth, our hair, our feet, our hands and our complexions.

Advertising has taught us how to dress—how to choose colors and fabrics and becoming styles.

Advertising has taught us how to talk, how to entertain.

One reason why so many women are charming is because so many women are reading advertising. From advertising they are learning the secrets of great beauty specialists. They are getting health information of inestimable value. They are learning the secrets of becoming dress from the famous designers of Paris and New York.
